

Team Building Day

Overview

"An Army marches on its stomach" – so said Napoleon Bonaparte. An army is a team of people working together with a common objective and they work so much better when they are well fed. It's exactly the same with your staff. Well nourished staff give better results.

So, what would be a better way to challenge, motivate and reward your staff than with a Paella Fella Team Build Day? Followed by a well deserved and delicious lunch?...

It is a unique team building and development opportunity for your management and staff alike – using the cooking of Paella as the vehicle.

Think of: The Apprentice meets Masterchef without the angst!...

...and with a sprinkling of the Generation Game.

Tasting the results...

So, how does it all work?

Your Objective (Your mission, should you choose to accept it)

Against the clock, Teams made up of your staff and managers work together to create and cook an authentic Paella from scratch. Their approach, progress and the finally cooked paella itself, will be marked based on criteria pre-defined by your business' goals and objectives. Prizes will be awarded!

It's not as easy or as crazy as it may sound.

Plus - you can customise the day to make it more or less challenging

Team Building - the best way!

The fruits of a days labour!

The Challenge

The approach is the process of creating and cooking paella as a motivational and reward based event.

Your staff working in carefully selected teams will be set the challenge of cooking a paella to specific criteria and against the clock. They will all have the same ingredients and equipment. They have to come together, work together and decide on:

- Who is going to set up the mobile kitchen – (and how do you set up a mobile kitchen?...)
- Who is going to prepare the paella ingredients? (Do you know how to cut whole chicken or rabbit properly? Or, how to prep vegetables for maximum taste and look?)
- How they come together to cook the paella as a team – (will too many cooks spoil the broth?)
- All this against the clock and against certain criteria (for which they will be judged and awarded points on - and points mean...?)

The ultimate objective is that they have to work together and get to know each other in a setting completely out of context of their normal working life. Just like in your business it will test them on:

- communication and problem solving,
- their organisation skills, logic, initiative and common sense
- working together and delivering to tight timescales and deadlines

All in a fun, enjoyable and challenging way.

Your host (Paella Fella) will observe, advise and give (some) guidance, taste test and provide feedback on the results.

Not only will your staff learn how to cook paella properly in a fun and constructive way, it gets them to work together as a team – they get to eat the results, too!
